Exciting Adventure With Bears.

Three of the crew of the steamship Intrepid, Captain Soutar, had a very exciting adventure at the Greenland seal fishery this season. During the time that their vessel was fast beset among the ice three of the crew set out one day to pay a visit to the ship Perseverance, of Peterhead, which lay apparently about four miles distant. After walking about a couple of miles it was seen that the distance between the two ships had been misjudged, and that in reality they were six miles apart, and the dangerous nature of the journey began to dawn upon the seamen when they realized how far they were from any vessel, and that their sealing clubs were the only weapons with which they were armed. When they came to realize the real distance they began to deliberate whether it would not be the best course to return to their ship. One of the trio insisted on making the journey, while the others were of opinion that they should give up the attempt. In the midst of the debate an unwelcome visitor came upon the scene in the shape of a she bear, with one of her cubs, and as she was fast coming up between the men and their ship the only chance of escape was to run on in the hope of reaching the Perseverance, a distance of about four miles. When the men took to their heels the bear quickened her pace, and in a short time was close upon the sailors. To attempt to face the animal with their clubs was useless, and accordingly one by one of the men took off portions of his clothing and threw them down on the ice. In this way the progress of the bear was retarded, as brain stopped to snuff and tear at each of the articles as she came up to them. By this means the men were enabled to keep a little ahead for about a couple of miles, by which time, however, they had parted with most of their clothing, one of them having nothing but his pants, a cravat and a woolen shirt upon him. He had retained possession of his club, and, fastening his cravat to the end of the weapon, he waved it as a signal of distress, and fortunately the attention of the crew of the Perseverance was attracted to the perilous position of the three seamen. Several of the crew of the Perseverance immediately set out, armed with guns, and after running about a mile they came up to the three men, just in time to save them, as they had almost no clothing left, and were quite exhausted with the chase. The bear and her cub were so close behind that the rescuers had no difficulty in dispatching them with several bullets. The following morning the three sailors returned to the Intrepid. They were escorted part of the way by a number of the crew of the Perseverance, and the male bear having been seen in the vicinity, apparently on the look-out for the she bear and her cub, he was likewise killed. The most of the men's clothes and their sea-boots were picked up, all more or less torn. The three men had been kindly treated on board the Perseverance and supplied with clothing, so that they suffered no bad effects from their exposure and exciting adventure.

A sensible author says: "Have your enemies? go and mind them not." That is a capital plan (adds the Bridgeport Standard), especially if the enemy is the largest and is patiently awaiting behind the fence with a club to discuss the matter with you. Better yet, go around.

Pharisee and Saddusee.

To church the two together went,
Both doubtless on devotion bent;
The parson preached with fluent ease,
On Pharisees and Sadducees;
And as they homeward slowly walked
The lovers on the sermon talked;
And he—he deeply loved the maid—
In soft and tender accents said:
"Darling, do you not think that we Are Pharisee and Sadducee?"
She flashed on him her bright black eyes,
In one sweet look of vexed surprise:
And then he hastened to aver
He was her constant worshiper.
"But Mary, I insist," said he,
"That you are very fair, I see;
I know you don't care much for me,
And that makes me sad, you see."

A GAME OF HEARTS.

Morton Lovyllan looked into his companion's face and wondered if she really possessed a heart! Or was she only—as had been rumored—a creature of intellect, one who required not, and wished not, the most precious of all life's blessings—love. Rather a difficult question! and her beautiful, queenly countenance, with its lustrous brown eyes and delicately chiseled features did not serve to satisfy his doubts.

He was accustomed to be a favorite with the gentler sex. Wealthy, intellectual, and handsome, he was very naturally appreciated by manœuvring mammas and marriageable daughters. Clara Vane was unlike the woman with whom he had been thrown in contact. Although among, she was not of them, and her indifference hurt him much more than he cared to confess, even to himself. So this evening, as they wandered together through the brilliantly illuminated rooms of a fashionable devotee, he coiled carelessly, albeit his eyes roamed searchingly upon her face

"Miss Vane, do you believe in love?"

She laughed—and, although her dusky cheek crimsoned a little, displayed not the slightest discomposure as she answered

"No—at least not as you do."

That sentence implied a certain amount of something that the gentleman scarcely liked. How should she know whether their beliefs were similar?

"Indeed!" he commented, somewhat dryly. "Would it be impertinent in me to inquire what your belief really is?"

She bit her lip.

"I make no pretensions to understanding any one's ideas upon this or any other subject better than they themselves do. I only know that my own opinion of love is very different from the latter day sentiment which is now dignified by that name."

He smiled provokingly.

"So is mine. We agree thus far, at any rate. Perhaps, were we to compare notes, the similarity would exist still further."

"Scarcely probable," she answered, calmly. "But it is not an interesting topic, and as it is of no consequence whether we consider it in the same light or no, I propose we discuss some other subject."

Of course after that the conversation was changed.

"Confound it! what's the use?" he murmured, sadly, that night—or rather that morning—after returning home. "Here I am, fairly bewitched after a woman, who, if report speaks truly, is just capable of feeling a particle of affection for any man, and who has demonstrated beyond a peradventure her utter indifference to me. In love with an iceberg! That's what's the matter! But I swear I won't make a fool of myself any longer! She can go her way, and I'll go mine!"

Whether this resolution would have been kept or no, is a question that must forever remain unsettled, as the next day Miss Vane had left town—gone, no one knew where; to remain, none knew how long.

But we, being wiser than the majority of folks, may follow her away from the crowded metropolis to a beautiful country seat, down in Kent, where, disgusted alike with the world and herself, she had sought refuge for the summer months with her young married friend, Mary Thurston.

"Now, Clara," said this young lady, as they sat together, some few evenings after Miss Vane's arrival, "of course you know how glad I am to have you here, and all that sort of thing, but what in the world possessed you to come? for, when I saw you last, you gave me no encouragement to hope for this visit."

"Well, Mary, to tell the truth, I hadn't the slightest idea of paying it two weeks ago; but—"

"But what?" eagerly asked her companion. "You were not involved in any love affair, were you? I heard something of a curious kind of flirtation you were having with somebody. It didn't become too serious—did it?"

"Yes, it did!" answered her guest impetuously, startled out of her usual reticence by that strange longing for sympathy which sometimes seizes the proudest of us. "I became acquainted with a man endowed with extraordinary gifts of mind and person, and I undertook to teach him a lesson. But, alas for human volition! I learned the lesson!"

"Does he know it?" interrupted her friend, anxiously.

"Know it?" she repeated in scorn. "No!—nor ever will! And that is the reason I have come to you so unexpectedly."

The conversation was here put an end to by the entrance of Captain Thurston.

"A letter for you, Mary. From Morton, I fancy," he said, carelessly tossing it into her lap.

The quick blood rushed into Clara's face. Even the name caused her heart to flutter strangely; but neither of her friends noticed her agitation—both being engrossed in their missives.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Mrs. Mary, half unconsciously.

Clara and her husband looked up in surprise. Her face was glowing joyfully, albeit her eyes were full of tears.

"What's the matter?" they asked in a breath.

"Oh, nothing much!" she replied. "Only I'm so glad. Clara, I never knew that you were acquainted with my half-brother, Morton Lovyllan."

Poor Clara! Her face, even to the roots of her hair, was scarlet; but she made no reply, and her friend continued, remorselessly: "He is coming to pay us a visit, and we may expect him every moment."

All the color fled swiftly from Clara's cheek.

So Clara read as follows:

"My Dear Sister—I am sick of the 'great metropolis,' sick of life, and sick of myself; am fast becoming, in fact, a misanthrope—sick of everything. So, to improve this woful condition of affairs, shall start to-night for your sweet, pretty country home. For the last few months I have made a fool of myself by falling in love, and that is a very serious business for a man of my peculiar temperament, I can assure you. Did you, during your visit here, ever know a Miss Clara Vane? I was in France at the time, you remember. Well, we have been indulging in what Dame Grundy would call 'a pleasant flirtation,' and, for the first time in his life, your brother confesses himself conquered. People say she has no heart. That I don't believe. It is utterly impossible so glorious a woman should be minus that most feminine appendage. But, one thing is certain, she has no heart for me; and that has left me without heart for anything else. (Please don't think this intended for a pun—I am in anything but a punning humor). As you know I am not in the habit of proclaiming my miseries, and hate pity above all things, burn this as soon as read, keep all the information contained herein to yourself, and don't say 'woman' to me while I remain. Lovingly, your brother,

"MORTON."

"Oh, Morton!" shouted his sister, joyfully, advancing with outstretched hands.

"Clara, here is my brother," said Mrs. Thurston, smilingly. "I believe, however, you are already acquainted with one another."

Thus urged, Clara advanced.

"Miss Vane!—and here!" said the gentleman, in amazement. Then, recovering himself: "Excuse me, but this meeting was so utterly unexpected, that I"— And here his glance suddenly fell upon the letter, which she still held.

"Mary gave it to me," she stammered, explainingly, interpreting aright his mute, astonished look.

He smiled. Some way, her embarrassment put him very much more at ease.

"She did? Well, what do you think of it?"

She looked around for assistance from some quarter; but husband and wife had left the room. So, very unwillingly, she answered:

"I don't know."

"You don't? Well," endeavoring to look into the eyes which so pertinaciously sought the floor, "are you sorry for me?"

"No," very low; and, the next moment, "my Clara Vane" was clasped close in a pair of manly arms, from which she made not the slightest motion to extricate herself.

Indian Beliefs.

During his numerous exploring expeditions for the government, Major Powell acquired a very familiar knowledge of the habits and beliefs of the Indians. Some of their traditions he has embodied in a lecture on "Indian Mythology," which he recently delivered in Washington. "The Indian," he said, "is a very positive person; he knows everything in the universe and out of it, and will always have an explanation ready for any event or phenomenon of nature that may occur. No doubt ever troubles the mind of the noble red man as to the accuracy of his statements; he knows them to be true; for have not these traditions been handed down to him, generation by generation, from the remotest antiquity? As to what are good deeds, the Indians' ideas are very peculiar. They generally believe, however, that if they steal all the horses they can lay their hands on and scalp all their enemies, they have rendered themselves worthy candidates for the 'happy hunting grounds.' Their ideas in regard to the situation of this happy country are very vague. Those tribes living on the sea shore will say it is beyond the 'great water.' Those living near a mountain range say it is beyond the high mountains, etc. Some of the tribes, the Pueblos, for instance, have seven different countries, piled one above another in a vertical direction, and having magic ladders upon which the good spirits climb from one country to another. Other tribes have their countries arranged side by side in a horizontal direction, while some of the Esquimaux Indians go to the edge of the world and tumble off, when they make a visit to their happy land." Major Powell related several Indian traditions illustrating their faith in their ancestors' explanations of various phenomena of nature. For instance, they believe that the sun is chased around the sky by a rabbit; that the god of rain dips his brush into the heavenly lake and sprinkles the earth, causing rain; that in winter he crushes ice and forms snow; also that the sky is covered with a curtain at night, pierced full of holes and with a lamp behind it, the light shining through the orifices producing the stars. The major closed the lecture with this old Indian proverb: "Let man talk a very long while and he will bore a large hole in a rock."

The Banner of the Prophet.

Now that the sultan is reported to have raised the prophet's banner, it is worth while to note what that is. It is black, about two ells wide, and was originally the curtain of the chamber of Ayesha, the favorite of Mahomet. As the prophet lay on his death bed in this chamber his chief warriors came to take leave of him, and he presented them with the curtain of the room as a banner, looking upon which they were to remember that they fought for Allah and Mahomet. Afterward it became the custom of the caliphs, when they entered upon a campaign, to have this standard (the Sandschak Scherif) borne before them. Still later it was settled that the banner was to be raised only when the war in which the sultans—in religion, the caliphs—engaged was entered upon in behalf of the faith. What gives this standard its peculiar significance is the belief that he who dies in its shadows goes at once to the highest joys of Paradise.

Two sisters—twins—have to be told every thing together, because they are so exactly alike they can't be told apart.

FARM, GARDEN AND HOUSEHOLD.

Household Hints.

Cleaning Carpets, Clothes, Etc.—Three ounces pulverized sapo castile dissolved in one quart boiling water, three ounces ammonia, three ounces ether, two ounces glycerine, two ounces alcohol, three quarts soft water; mix well and cover tight.

To Brighten a Copper Boiler.—Use a coarse cloth; have a pail of very hot water; soap the cloth a little; sprinkle on plenty of pulverized borax; and rub the boiler well; rinse off with hot water, and dry with a soft cloth. The boiler can be brightened in this way as quickly as with acid.

Tarnished Gilt Frames.—These may be made bright and fresh by washing them over with a brush dipped in the white of an egg.

To Clean White Kid Gloves.—Make a thick lather with white soap and warm water; it must be very thick, so that it can be turned upside down and not fall out; put your gloves on; take a soft cloth and quickly apply the lather, and as quickly rub off with another soft clean cloth; there must be as little moisture as possible to the lather; clean one finger at a time; the gloves must not be allowed to get wet.

To Wash Corduroy.—Pin the garment to the clothes line and beat the dust out of it with a rattan; then wash in water prepared with the magical mixture, rinsing in three separate tepid waters; if the corduroy is white, add a little bluing to the last rinse. Better to be dried quickly in the wind.

Suggestions About Plants.—Oleanders require but little water from September to April, but the rest of the year they need a great deal of water and sun. Sweet geraniums need sun and water, begonias and foliage plants do well with water and less sun.

To Drive off Red Ants.—Grease a plate with lard and set it where the ants are troublesome; place a few sticks around the plate for the ants to climb upon; they will desert the sugar bowl for the lard; occasionally turn the plate over a fire where there is no smoke, and the ants will drop off into it; reset the plate, and in a few repetitions you will catch all the ants; they trouble nothing else while lard is accessible.

Ashes for Potatoes—Phosphates.

"A Reader," Homer, N. Y., asks if common ashes are good for potatoes, and if so, how should they be applied to get the most benefit from them? What is the value of leached ashes in proportion to unleached; also which is the best kind of phosphates for corn, and how much should be put into a hill?"

Replies.—Wood ashes are an excellent fertilizer for potatoes. As the roots of this crop occupy the whole of the ground, and meet beneath the rows, the ashes may be applied on the surface after it is harrowed and before it is furrowed for planting. A hundred bushels per acre will not be too much if it can be afforded, and will benefit the soil for ten years. Leached ashes are about one-fourth the value of unleached. Any good brand of superphosphate of lime will be good for corn. One tablespoonful is enough for a hill, and if the hills are three feet apart each way, that will require 300 pounds per acre.

Scrofulous Swelling in a Steer.

"I have a steer two years old that has a bunch on the lower part of the side of his neck, just back of his jaw-bone, but not fast to the bone. It is now about as large as a two-quart bowl; has been there about six months; it has broken, and discharges at times, and sometimes has a bad smell; it affects his breathing some; he does not like to have any one touch it, it being very sore to the touch, and resembles in every way a large carbuncle. Would like to know what it is and what the cure."

Reply.—This is a scrofulous tumor or swelling, and may be very difficult to get rid of. A proper manner of treating it would be to dress it with, or inject into it, four grains of carbolic acid, dissolved in a pint of water, twice a day until the condition is improved. Then dress with compound tinctures of myrrh until it is healed. It may be necessary to use the knife to open the tumor so as to get the acid solution to the bottom of it.

Treatment for Heaves—Cure for Lice.

"I have a mare that is troubled with the heaves; can she be cured; if so, how, and, if not, what treatment will be best to keep them down; also, what is the best remedy for blue lice on cattle; is it of any use to give saltpeter?"

Reply.—Heaves may generally be cured by changing the food. Give no dry feed at all, but cut the hay or fodder, wet it and sprinkle the grain, ground finely, upon the feed, feeding it while moist; give a tablespoonful of salt with every feed. Heaves frequently result from indigestion, and sometimes from the dust in the food affecting horses which are constitutionally prone to the affection. Saltpeter will have no effect upon lice. To remove them, rub on the parts where they abound a mixture of four parts of lard, one of kerosene oil, and one of flour of sulphur.

A single woman, aged seventy-five, living alone in the hamlet of Pleux, France, had for years kept a large number of dogs. She lately fell into the fire, probably during a fit, and was burned to death. Her body was found partly eaten by the dogs.

Hearts Exchanged.

We plighted our hearts, my love, and I,
I in my arms the maiden clasping;
I could not tell the reason why,
But, oh! I trembled like an aspen.

Her father's love also bade me gain
I want, and shook like any reed!
I strove to act the man in vain;
We had exchanged our hearts indeed.

Items of Interest.

It makes the telegraph wires tremble to pronounce some of the Turkish generals' names.

The man who courted investigation says it is not near so agreeable as courting a charming woman.

"A physician of sixty years' standing," remarks a [illegible] fellow must be no [illegible] time.

A young man in Otsego county, N. Y., had his teeth extracted to aid him in breaking off the habit of chewing tobacco.

A Frenchman has invented a little machine, which, being wound up once a month and attached to the tail feathers of a hen, records the number of eggs which she lays.

An improved form of challenge to a duel is the following Quaker note: "If thou wilt eat twelve unripe apples just before retiring at night, I will do the same, and we shall see who survives."

"Don't you know the prisoner, Mr. Jones?" "Yes, to the bone." "What is his character?" "Didn't know he had any." "Does he live near you?" "So near that he has spent only five shillings for firewood in eight years."

A little boy was frightened to death in Astoria, Ill., a few days ago. Another little boy, in a hideous costume, sprang upon him to scare him. He fell in his fright prostrate. Scrambling a little further he fell again, a corpse.

Last year all the speeches began with the familiar sentence: "One hundred years ago." To-day we notice a pleasing variation is introduced into the orations, and "one year ago, to-day," strikes upon our ear with a welcome freshness.

Two Pi Utes in Newark Valley, Nevada, hacked each other to pieces over a game of poker. They fought with knives for half an hour, surrounded by a ring of Indians, none of whom dared to interfere. The only remark of the survivor, who shortly afterward died, was: "Keep cut; keep dead!"

As a dandy was wending his way through a narrow passage at the top of Charlotte street, Glasgow, he met a pretty girl, and said to her: "Pray, my dear, what do you call this passage?" "Balsam's passage," she replied. "Ah, then," said he, "I'm like Balsam—stopped by an angel." "And I," rejoined the girl, as she pushed past him, "am like an angel—stopped by an ass."

A Green Salt's Mistake.

"Erie, arie, arie, whoop! I can thrash any man out of his stockings." That is what a young sailor shouted as he jumped off the schooner Defiance, just in port, and struck solidly on his bottom among the gang of coal heavers on Reed's dock.

It was his maiden voyage and he had come all the way from Buffalo, consequently he was chock full of oxygen that must have a vent, and the words flipped out of his mouth like corks from pop bottles.

It seemed so good to him to tread the solid land again that he felt like smashing somebody, and he wanted to impress the coal heavers with his superiority, so he called up "Mike," the boss of the gang, to feel of his muscle. While showing off he was hit in the eye by a big quid of forty-cent tobacco. This strange to say, riled him terribly.

He hoisted all sail, swore like a Barbary pirate, and offered to lick the whole gang in one minute and a half by the sun.

He began on the boss, but before his bunch of fives could find Mike's face, his nose ran aground on a monstrous fist, and with visions of ten thousand stars and a tailless comet flashing through his brain, he sat down on the coal, and before the stars left him "the boys" had him tied in a double-bow knot around a stanchion, and amused themselves sifting coal screenings down the back of his neck.—Erie (Pa.) Dispatch.

Purchase of Manhattan Island.

The rocky point of Manhattan island, near what is now known as the Battery, was, on the sixth of May, 1626, the scene of one of the most interesting business transactions which has ever occurred in the world's history. It was the purchase of the site of the city of New York. The West India company had instructed Peter Minuet to treat with the Indians for their hunting grounds, before he took any steps toward the erection of buildings. He accordingly made a somewhat superficial survey of the island, which had been designated as the field for pioneer operations, and estimated its area at about 22,000 acres. He then called together some of the principal Indian chiefs, and offered beads, buttons and trinkets in exchange for their real estate. They accepted the terms with unfeigned delight, and the bargain was closed at once. The value of the baubles which secured the title to the whole of Manhattan island was about sixty guilders, equal in our currency to twenty-four dollars.

THURSDAY, MAY 24, 1877.

The next meeting of the Republican State Committee at the Lochiel House, Harrisburg, on Tuesday, 29th inst., at 2 o'clock P. M., to fix the time and place for the next Republican State Convention, and the transaction of such important business.

HENRY M. HOYT, Chairman.
A. WILSON NORRIS, Secretary.

Ex-Gov. Curtin has been tendered the position of Solicitor of the Treasury, and was solicited by the President to accept, but like a sensible man preferred the equally honorable and more profitable station he has chosen in private life.

— Those who hesitate about which side to bestow their sympathies in the Russo-Turkish war, should remember that Russia followed the example of the United States in emancipating her serfs, and that Turkey still deals in human flesh as merchandise. The Russian government, though a despotism, has not failed, within the last thirty years, to aid the advance of liberal principles of government in the old world. It was one of the first governments to recognize the Republic of France. True, Russia has her sins, and she has been guilty of much intolerance towards her own subjects, but in the way of respect for qualities which command regard among liberal people, she is far higher in the scale than Turkey.

The reform Secretaries of Departments are indulging in a good deal of bother about the new-paper advertising. They are devising all sorts of plans to prevent the newspapers from cheating the government and induce them to work cheaper for Uncle Sam than for other men. The latest is a circular from the Post Office Department to certain newspapers requesting confidential information concerning their circulation, rates of advertising and discount to the Postal department. No doubt these certain newspapers will take Uncle Sam into their confidence and whisper in his ear their exact circulation to a single subscriber—honor bright, and no lying. But why all this nonsense? If the government is to be run, as we understand from Carl Schurz, on plain business principles, a correct business man would manage his affairs. Why not manage this advertising business as any business man of common sense would?—send your advertisements to prominent newspapers in different parts of the country and pay the bill, as other men do, without whining. Why should the government expect to be served at lower rates than the business man?

STATE POLITICS.

A STRANGE AND DEMORATIC HONORS AND FORTUNE DEFIAT.

It is singular with what tenacity the morning politicians who adhere to the broken fortunes of the Democratic party seek its empty honors, and are willing to become objects of popular sacrifice as a means of holding its organization together from year to year.

There are three State offices to be filled in the election of October, namely Supreme Judge, Auditor General and State Treasurer, and the candidates for these embrace many of the old stagers, with a number of new men who are cautiously going down for the honor of the party.

For Supreme Judge there are Stites M. Clark, Indiana county, Samuel D. Wilson, Beaver; Judge Trunkey, Venango; George A Jinks, Jefferson, E. S. Golden, Armstrong; Henry P. Ross, Montgomery; James R. Ludlow and George M. Dallas, Philadelphia. The west will make a strong effort to get the Judge, though it was understood at the last convention that Judge Ross, of Montgomery, was to have the next nomination.

For State Treasurer, the candidates are, Daniel O. Barr, Allegany county, Justus M. Temple, present Auditor General, Greene; A. C. Noyes, Clinton; William M. Reynolds, Center; and a Mr. Bowers, of Cumberland county.

For State Treasurer, the candidates are, W. P. Schell, of Bedford county; Herman P. Yerkes, of Bucks; Gen. Wiltman, of Erie; Gen. Geo. M. Steinman, of Lancaster; Lawrence Gobb, of Berks, and Samuel Josephs, of Philadelphia.

A controlling influence in securing the most suitable for either and in the case of the above offices will be the great national question of 1876. If the West is permitted to get any two of the above honors, as candidates, it will enhance the chances of the State for the nomination for Governor. Hence both Senator A. H. Dill and Gen. McCandless will labor to throw the nominations for Supreme Judge and Auditor General in the West, but in doing this, while it improves the chances of their candidates in the future, they may produce antagonism for themselves, which will be hard to overcome at home.

The Death of Miss Chisolm

MERIDIAN, Miss., May 15.—Miss Cornelia Chisolm, who was wounded in the Kemper affray, died to-day of gangrene of the arm resulting from lack of prompt surgical attention.

Miss Chisolm was wounded in the defense of her father, Judge Chisolm, on Sunday, the 29th of April. Her part in the events of that bloody day was of an heroic character. Judge Chisolm was taken to the jail at De Kalb, and six men were placed on guard over him. Fearing foul play, his wife and daughter Cornelia went with him to the jail. His daughter then discovered that the guns of the guards were empty, and that the protection accorded to her father was a sham. A large crowd of armed men, about 200 in number, had gathered outside the jail. Cornelia pretended that she wished to obtain food, and passing out through the crowd, went home, and concealed in her dress a flask of powder, some shot, and a few newspapers for wadding. Taking some food in her hand she returned to the jail, carrying safely through the crowd her store of ammunition. When the jail was attacked the guards deserted and the family were left alone to defend themselves. The Judge fought well, but would have been killed outright had not Cornelia interfered between the guns of the crowd and her father. She pushed the guns away with one hand while hanging round her father's neck with the other, and saved him repeatedly. The Judge was finally shot in 11 places, however, and fell, and Cornelia in the rain of bullets fired at the Judge received a shot in the hand and five in the leg. Even then she had the presence of mind to give out that her father was dead, and by this means influenced the crowd to go off, and secured a chance to have the Judge carried to his house, where his wounds could be dressed and medical aid given to him. She showed a courage and devotion of the most exalted type throughout the whole day, and it was due to her reckless indifference to her own life alone that Judge Chisolm was not massacred on the spot. He has since died, however, and now his brave daughter follows him.

An Extraordinary Incident.

Ex-Gov. Carpenter, of Iowa, is about to leave the office of Second Controller of the Treasury, under circumstances that are quite refreshing in these days of office hunting. Sometime ago the Cabinet decided that the Pacific Coast should have a representative among the heads of bureaus, and as Iowa has four prominent officers—namely, Secretary of War, Land Commissioner, Third Auditor, and Second Controller—it was decided to vacate one of them, and Third Auditor Tabor was selected as the person to go. Hearing this, Gov. Carpenter inquired of Secretary Sherman whether, if he should resign, Mr. Tabor would be retained. The Secretary replied affirmatively, and Gov. Carpenter then said that his formal resignation would be forthcoming whenever his successor was named. Mr. Tabor is an old man, and has been in this office nearly 18 years. He is poor and would be at loss to know what to do if he had to leave his position. Gov. Carpenter is a young man and has been in office only 15 months. As between himself and Auditor Tabor, he told the Secretary he thought he ought to retire. Instances are very rare where one man resigns to keep another in office. Gov. Carpenter intends to return to Iowa and enter journalism. W. W. Upton, of Oregon, has been selected to fill the vacancy, and will take the office July 1st.

The New Medical Bill

Among the most important acts of the late Legislature, approved by the Governor, was one to protect the people of the Commonwealth against incompetent practitioners of medicine or surgery and obstetrics, and it is now a law. It provides that any person who shall attempt to practice medicine or surgery for a valuable consideration by opening a transient office within the Commonwealth, or who shall, by handbill or other form of written or printed advertisements, assign such transient office or other place to persons seeking medical or surgical advice by prescription, or who shall itinerate from place to place, or from house to house, and shall propose to cure any person sick or afflicted by the use of any medicine, means, or agency whatever, for a valuable consideration, shall, before being allowed to practice in this manner, appear before the Court of Quarter Sessions of the county wherein such person desires to practice, and shall furnish satisfactory evidence to such clerk of his capability, and shall in addition take out a license for one year, and pay into the county treasury for the use of such county the sum of fifty dollars therefor, whereupon it shall be the duty of such clerk to issue to such applicant a proper certificate or license on payment of the fee $5 for his services. Failing to comply with the requirements of the act, a penalty not less than $100 and not to exceed $100, is imposed for each and every such offense, for the use of the county wherein such misdemeanor is committed, or a term of imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the Court.

The State's Oil Interests.

The report of the Secretary of the Treasury for the year 1876 shows that the exportation of petroleum ranked as third in value of commercial industries of the United States. Nearly the entire production of petroleum of the country is from a few counties in Pennsylvania. This great industry is quietly spreading its developments over the rocky hills and through the alluvial valleys of the Northwestern part of the State, always promoting the prosperity of the locality in which the development is made. What is known as the Warren district consists of a narrow strip of land lying nearly east of Warren borough, about half a mile distant and running nearly north up the Conewango creek, and at present reaching beyond the land owned by the Commonwealth, upon which is being erected the Insane Hospital. To-day these lands belonging to the State could be sold at a considerable advance upon the original cost, including all expenditures up to this date. Indeed, the State might go into the oil business on a large scale, and these few hundred acres would probably furnish sufficient grease to lubricate the machinery employed in running the government for some time to come. The latest "strike" is a well immediately north of the asylum grounds which is flowing not less than two hundred barrels per day. There are in this locality some fifty producing wells, with a daily production of about nine hundred barrels, whilst the entire production of the county is estimated at twenty-nine thousand. Although the price of petroleum has steadily fallen off within a few months, owing to the European war, the energy displayed by operators has not seemingly relaxed one whit.

WARREN'S GREAT SCANDAL.

GENERAL HARRISON ALLEN BOMBARDS HIS OWN HOUSE—HE IS HELD AT BAY BY THE ALLIED FORCES—THE "OTHER FELLOW" RETREATS—HEAVY FIRING ALL ALONG THE LINE.

Some time since the announcement was made that ex Auditor General Harrison Allen, of Warren, had begun proceedings in divorce against his wife and soon after came the statement that Mrs Allen had instituted a countersuit of the same kind. General Allen retained the legal services of William D. Brown, of Warren, and Mrs. Allen secured Judge Brown, of Warren, and Hon. H. L. Richmond, of Meadville, as her attorneys. Witnesses were not wanting who promised to make the case one of the most sensational and disgusting which ever been heard in our courts. General Allen has abandoned his fine residence near Warren, to his wife, and has announced that he will stop at no sacrifice to break the bonds between him and his faithless partner. It was supposed that the case would be settled in the courts but on Wednesday afternoon the General heard that his wife was entertaining a stranger at his house and, securing the aid of several policemen, he proceeded to arrest the disturber of his domestic peace. Mrs. Allen held the fort in front with a pistol while her companion escaped from the rear and drove off hotly pursued by the general and the police who were fired upon by the fugitive and who returned the shots with great liberality. No harm was done by the bombardment and the man escaped to the woods. The following particulars are given in a special to the Titusville Herald:

OPENING THE CAMPAIGN.

Between four and five o'clock Wednesday afternoon the chief of police of Warren, with General Harrison Allen, attempted to arrest George Watson, of Titusville, for indecent conduct with the general's wife. Mrs. Allen resisted any entrance to General Allen's house, and when the door was forced she discharged a revolver without any damage, but so close as to blow the powder into the face of the policeman. Watson, who had been surprised in the house, about this time made his escape through a window and jumped into a buggy standing in a convenient location. The general and officers jumped into another carriage and gave pursuit. Watson fired two shots from his buggy, when the officers returned the fire, keeping up a regular fusillade for nearly two miles. The horses were forced to their utmost speed, and rather than be captured Watson jumped from his buggy and ran into the woods. Up to this time George has not been seen in these parts. Warren is having a high old sensation, and if somebody is not soon killed it will be remarkable.

LATER PARTICULARS.

When the chief of police and seven backers arrived at the house and demanded admittance it was supposed they were men of ordinary valor, but the first intimation of the presence of a masked battery completely demoralized them. Watson came out with a revolver in hand and said: "The first man that molests me does so at his peril," got into his buggy and drove off. One of the posse, more valiant than the rest, requested the chief to "send for more men." After pursuing the fugitive a mile or two, he abandoned his rig for the protection of the woods, returning to General Allen's house at night and sending word to the officers that he did not intend to run away; would be down town; wanted no nonsense; the first man to interfere would get hurt. The brave policemen charges the failure of his mission to the cowardice of his command!

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

The reputation it has attained, in consequence of the marvellous cures it has produced during the last half century, is a sufficient assurance to the public that it will continue to realize the happiest results that can be desired. In almost every section of country there are persons, publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs, by its use. All who have tried it, acknowledge its superiority; and where its virtues are known, no one hesitates as to what medicine to employ to relieve the distress and suffering peculiar to pulmonary affections. CHERRY PECTORAL always affords instant relief, and performs rapid cures of the milder varieties of bronchial disorder, as well as the more formidable diseases of the lungs.

As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of Childhood, it is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued and restored to health.

This medicine gains friends at every trial, as the cures it is constantly producing are too remarkable to be forgotten. No family should be without it, and those who have once used it never will.

Eminent Physicians throughout the country prescribe it, and Clergymen often recommend it from their knowledge of its effects.

—A few days ago we promised a faithful bourbon Democrat of this place that he might have the use of our daily Buffalo Courier. The next day the paper ceased to make its appearance, and we have seen nothing of it since. As far as we are concerned we can spare the Courier better than any of our exchanges, but we feel sorry for that good Democrat who cannot afford to subscribe, but had counted upon taking great satisfaction in the perusal of our paper. We are quite certain he will vote the republican ticket hereafter if he is deprived of the Courier.

—Rev. Whiteside preached an earnest and powerful sermon last Sunday upon the pertinent question of "How much owest thou unto thy Lord." —The Titusville Herald says the attention of the entire petroleum trade is fixed upon the new Bullion Run district. The average production of petroleum last year did not exceed 15,000 barrels a day. The demand for oil is constantly increasing, and at present Bullion Run, which yields 3,000 barrels a day, is the only hope of the trade that the supply will keep up with the demand. It appears also that the new district is the only spot in the entire oil region where flowing 100-barrel wells are found, and the interest among oilmen is intense. What the resources of Bullion Run are is involved in some uncertainty. None of the old-fashioned 1,200 and 1,500 barrel gushers are found, but there is no telling what may be developed yet.

—An exchange very wisely says: "Put us writing all contracts, and take receipts for all money paid, however small the amount may be." How many misunderstandings arise from the loose manner in which business matters are talked up, and then, when each party puts his own construction on the conversation, the matter is dismissed by each with "all right."—Frequently it turns out all wrong, and becomes a question for lawyers and courts. More than half the expensive and useless litigation in the country would be saved if people made a habit of putting their agreements in writing. Each word has its own peculiar meaning. May be the change of its position in a sentence conveys an entirely different meaning from the one intended. When reduced to writing ideas are fixed and definite.

BRADFORD CORRESPONDENCE.

[FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.]

BRADFORD, PA., MAY 22, 1877.

To the Editor of the Miner:

The present low price of oil makes everything in the way of business look very blue around here. The market steadily declines and bottom may be expected at any day. I give you Derrick quotations of United for the past week as follows:

	Highest.	Lowest.	Closing.
Monday May 14,	$2.13¾	$2.12¾	$2.12¾
Tuesday,	2.12¾	2.10	2.10¾
Wednesday,	2.10¾	2.09	2.09¾
Thursday,	2.13¾	2.13¾	2.13¾
Friday,	2.11½	2.10	2.10
Saturday,	2.08¾	2.06½	2.06¾

The latest for United to-day by telegraph is $2.10; Tuna Valley, $1.85.

There are rumors of some operators here shutting down until higher prices warrant a further search after wealth; but I do not place much credit on such reports. There are few but what think operations should be suspended, and expect their neighbors to suspend accordingly.

Two new wells are in on Kendall Creek; one on P. Storms, the other on Schoonover's farm, and are claimed to be good for thirty barrels apiece, but presume they may very safely be set down as ten or twelve barrel wells.

Emery, Patterson & Co. have two new average wells in the neighborhood of DeGeller.

The P. C. L. & P. Co. have completed No. 30, Melvin, it is a small well at present; they will torpedo it—the same company expect to reach third sand with four wells this week, Nos. 30, 34, 37 and 39, Melvin farm.

Sand has not been reached in the Fisher well, Kendall Creek, yet but final developements may be looked for soon.

Some parties are building a rig for a test well on Boyd Valley.

Last Wednesday afternoon wild fire set the engine house of Taft & Payne's well, Clark farm, in a blaze; it was put out with difficulty and but slight damage was done.

Early in the morning of Thursday, as two men were passing H. L. Taylor & Co's. No. 4 depot well the gas arising from a recent flow communicated with a lighted lantern they were carrying causing an explosion, which enveloped the entire rig in flames. Everything was quickly destroyed and both men were badly scorched, one of them seriously though not dangerously so. Another tank was put up to catch the next flow, but the fire not being extinguished out when it came a second conflagration was the result, and THAT tank was destroyed. It was satisfactorily ascertained that no fire was present before the third tank was put in.

A few showers of rain have improved the dry and dusty streets and made our shade trees useful as well as ornamental.

The Buffalo Express

The Buffalo Express is not the largest paper in the city of Buffalo, but is really one of the best. It is a people's daily, cheap, condensed, bright and ably edited. It has all the news of the larger dailies, condensed in smaller space and at a less cost. Its local news is complete, crisp and readable. Its editorials are thoughtful and often masterly. It is republican in principle, but is not the organ of any party, man or set of men. It is just the paper for the farmer, mechanic or business man, who has not the time or disposition to pick out an item of news from a column or more of meaningless sentences strung together to fill up the paper. If any of our friends want a daily, and a daily paper is now almost indispensible to every one, we advise them to send $8 and try the Express one year. Try it once.

W. D. Gallup's New Store

Our readers will find the new advertisement of W. D. Gallup's New Store and New Stock in another column deserving of attention. Mr. Gallup has so completely renovated the store building occupying the first floor of the Sartwell block that a stranger would need to look twice to make sure that it was not a new store. He has also just returned from the city with a select assortment of the latest styles of Dry Goods and Dress Goods which he will be pleased to show his friends. Every yard of goods is new, and the purchaser will not need to look over an old and musty stock to select something fresh and new. He has also a large assortment of Millinery and Ladies' Furnishing goods, which department is under charge of Mrs. Gallup. This Store is centrally located and is a superior business point, thus we see no reason why Will. should not receive a large patronage and prosper as his many merits deserve.

Eldred Items.

ELDRED, Pa., May 21, 1877.

Hon. A. T. Barden, of the firm of Barden & Roberts, accompanied by his wife, returned home from New York to-day, where he has been for the last ten days purchasing goods for the summer trade; and to judge from the pile of goods which have arrived at the depot, his purchases must have been extensive.

The bark peelers have commenced their annual onslaught on the trees, and notwithstanding the low price paid for that article this season we understand that the quantity peeled will be as large as former years. Mr. Eli Wolcott alone has a contract for 1000 cords.

The camp meeting committee will hold a meeting in the grove on the camp ground on Saturday afternoon, June 2d, at 2 o'clock, for the purpose of locating stands, tents etc. Parties desirous of having tents on the ground should be present and thus secure a good location.

The religious meeting at Shell Town under direction of the Rev. A. W. Merville, Eldred, and Rev. Mr. Daly, Portville, N. Y., was brought to a close on Sunday last, when at 1 o'clock p. m. ten persons were baptized in the Allegheny river, eight by immersion and two by sprinkling. There will be another meeting on Sunday next in the Wright school House over the river, and at 1 o'clock there will be some twelve or more immersed in the river.

Rev. Mr. Daly, Portville, N. Y. occupied the pulpit in the Union Church on Sunday evening last.

Since our Murphy meeting here last week the movement is steadily gaining ground and members signing the pledge. Major D. W. King, Westonville, N. Y., Rev. S. D. Morris, State Line, and others will speak at a meeting to be held in the Union Church on Wednesday evening, the 23d inst., particulars of which I will give you in my next.

Oil News.—There is no news of any special interest to report from the Oil territory. The Bennis, Packard & Co. well on Indian creek is still flowing, and there are any amount of contradictory reports respecting it, some claiming ten barrels a day while others go down to four. The McMullen well on the Arthur Loop farm on the same creek is down 1160 feet with first rate indications of being a good well. Follett Bros. well on the Lewis Loop farm is down about 600 feet. We started in a former letter that the engine and tools for the Knapp's Creek Co. had arrived; the drillers are now on the ground but by some mischance the boiler did not arrive until yesterday but operations will not commence at once.

These miserable pests to the farmer and gardener, the potato bugs, are here again this season in full battle array, and wherever the vines have got above the ground they are covered with this filthy thing while others are promenading the sidewalks and sitting on the fences in front of a potato patch waiting the advent of the vines.

VERITAS.

SUITS FOR WAGES TAKE PRECEDENCE.—In arranging the civil list for the guidance of our Courts of Common Pleas throughout the State, the Prothonotaries of the several counties of this Commonwealth are now required to obey the provisions of the following act passed by the last Legislature:

SECTION 1. Be it enacted, &c., That in all cases now pending, or which may hereafter be brought before any court of this Commonwealth, for the recovery of the wages of manual labor only, it shall be the duty of the Prothonotary preparing the list of civil causes to place all claims for the wages of labor first on the list, and the court shall proceed to try all such cases as they occur on the list; provided, that a statement of the plaintiff's claim be filed in such cases, showing that the claims respectively are for manual labor alone.

Journalism in Oildom.

Enterprise and business sagacity always bring their own reward, but perhaps in no business are those qualifications more necessary to success than in that of publishing a newspaper. As a rare example of newspaper success we refer our readers to the career of the "Oil City Daily Derrick," published at Oil City. But a few years ago this paper was started, in the face of the most discouraging circumstances. It has been in existence only about five years, and yet in that short time has attained a circulation of nearly SIX THOUSAND COPIES per day, or about double that of all the other Oil Region papers combined. This has been done by its enterprise. Money is never spared to obtain the very latest and most reliable news from all quarters. Its manager, Col. "Dick" Longwell, is a practical printer, has devoted his life to the business and knows just how to make a paper. In politics the Derrick is independent, devoting more space to the oil business and always ready to help the producers. It is the acknowledged "organ of oil" and its statistics and quotations are quoted far and near. It has made Oil City the "Hub" of oildom and to-day stands well up among the most influential papers published in the State. In the McKean County oil district it has a special reporter, and daily letters from Bradford, Tarport and other oil towns may always be found. We recommend the paper to all desiring the latest and most reliable news. Read their card published elsewhere.

I have used Davis' Home Relief for pain in my livery stable for the last five years, and I think there is no better remedy for sprains, galls, corns, colic, or inflammation of the bowels. At one time I sprained my ankle badly, and after suffering terrible agony and loss of sleep, I used one fourth bottle and experienced immediate relief.

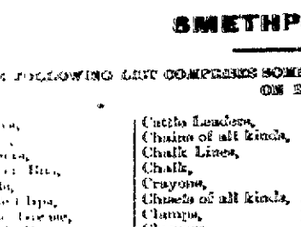
TWO IMPORTANT INVENTIONS

OF INTEREST TO EVERY ONE.

1st. A PIANO OR PARLOR ORGAN CHAIR, with an adjustable back,—made to support the back of the sitter while leaning forward in the ordinary position for playing, and by a simple arrangement, which gives it a backward and at the same time a downward movement, follows his motions and supports him in any position without interfering in the least with the freedom of the movements.



2d. A PLATFORM ROCKER ON CASTORS, with the long easy movement of the old style, without the perpetual rockers and other disfigurements of recent boring, in fact, the only Platform Rocker made that has a perfectly satisfactory movement.

THE McKEAN COUNTY MINER

is the only paper published in the county seat, the oldest, leading, and best paper in the county, and of the Pleasant Territories of Northern Pennsylvania. It is Illustrated in every large and monthly interesting, and as an Advertising Medium is second to none published in Northwestern Pennsylvania or this State.

What Anonymous Revelations Did.

A widow lady, Mme. de P——, endowed with wealth, beauty and spotless fame, was engaged to be married to a gentleman in Paris who lately received anonymous revelations reflecting on his bride's character. Therefore he turned her present and letters. She implored an interview—explanation. He sent back a verbal reply that he had none to give. The poor lady roamed about his portals, and returned home broken hearted and shot herself through the head. The falsehood of the malevolent allegations has since been proven.

Tyrant Husbands and Scolding Wives.

"Domestic infelicity," which newspaper reporters nowadays credit with playing such an important part in life's drama, is often the result of lingering or chronic disease. What husband or wife can be cheerful, smiling and pleasant, when constantly suffering from the tortures of some dread disease? Perhaps the husband's liver becomes torpid, and he experiences bitter, disagreeable taste or nausea, has chilly sensations, alternating with great heat and dryness of the surface of his body, pain in his sides, shoulders or back, eyes and skin are tinged with yellow, feels dull, indisposed and dizzy. Through his suffering he becomes gloomy, despondent, and exceedingly irritable in temper. Instead of resorting to an reliable a remedy as a few small doses of Dr. Pierce's Purgative Pellets, and following up their action with the use of Golden Medical Discovery, to work the biliary poison out of the system and purify the blood, if he play the part of a "penny wise and pound foolish" man he will attempt to economize by saving the small cost of these medicines. Continuing to suffer, his nervous system becomes impaired, and he is fretful and peevish—a fit subject to become embroiled in "domestic infelicity." Or the good wife may, from her too laborious duties or family cares, have become subject to such chronic affections as are peculiarly incident to her sex, and being reduced in blood and strength, suffering from backache, nervousness, headache, internal fever, and enduring pains too numerous to mention, she may become peevish and fretful—anything but a genial helpmate. In this deplorable condition of ill health, should she act wisely and employ Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, it will in due time by its cordial, tonic and nervine properties, restore her health and transform from the peevish, scolding, irritable, tempered invalid to a happy, cheerful wife. Laying aside lawly and speaking seriously, husbands and wives, you will find the Family Medicines above mentioned reliable and potent remedies. For full particulars of their properties and uses, see Pierce's memorandum book, which is given away by all druggists.

The Best Restorative!

Of failing energy, that to which the fagged-out man of business, the brain-fatigued author, the tired advocate or the weary artisan can resort with the greatest certainty that it will revive his overwrought powers, is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a most genial tonic cordial, as well as a benign remedy for disorders of the stomach, liver, bowels and urinary organs, and a means of eradicating and preventing intermittent and remittent fevers. It not only enriches the blood and creates a new fund of energy in the system, but it has the effect of expelling impurities from the life current which beget disease. The injurious influence of abrupt transitions of temperature, of an unwholesome climate and injurious diet, are counteracted by it, and it promotes digestion, appetite and sound repose. Give it a trial and be convinced.

Sprightly at Eighty.

WILLSBORO', Essex Co., N. Y., Aug. 13.

DEAR SIRS:—During the summer and winter of 1858 and 1859 I was afflicted with a severe pain in my side and chest. This was accompanied by a very hard cough, and I frequently raised large quantities of blood. I called upon a number of physicians, all of whom prescribed for me, but to no effect. For six or eight months I continued to grow worse, when I was induced to try Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. I found great relief from the first bottle. I afterwards used two more bottles, since which time I have been able to attend to my business as before.

Yours truly, ROYAL GOFF.

The inventors of Burnett's Cocoaine—knowing that when the loss of hair occurs, it is generally from that part of the head where the greatest heat is necessarily generated, and that animal fats by their nature induce heat rather than alleviate it—turned their attention and pharmaceutical science toward vegetable oils, as the basis of a medicament to promote the growth and preserve the beauty of the hair. The cocos cocus, or Cocoanut Oil, presented itself most strongly, as possessing many properties peculiarly adapted for the purpose; but its odor was objectionable, and its density (except when exposed to heat) seemed for a long time to defy all efforts to render it available, for popular use in cooler climates. By a scientific selection of other ingredients, those which will chemically combine with the oil have been discovered, and they together have produced a compound, which is unqualifiedly pronounced to be the best that has yet appeared.

In the form presented this oil is permanently deodorized and held in a combination which peculiarly adapts it for the toilet; Burnett's Cocoaine is unrivaled in delicacy and agreeableness—cooling in its nature—and possesses such a penetrating affinity for the secretions of the skin, that it is rapidly absorbed.

Its greatest efficacy is best secured by a perfect cleansing, before its application, of the hair and scalp, under which circumstances this oil allays irritation, removes all tendency to dandruff and invigorates the action of the capillaries to the highest degree. Its effect upon the glossiness and richness of the hair is such as cannot be surpassed; and it is offered to the public in the firm belief that it only requires to be known to supersede all other preparations. We are confident that no one who will make a trial of its efficacy will be willing to return to the use of any other preparation.
